ABSTRAK

Kata Kunci: Penanda Transisi, Narasi Alkitab, Sekolah Minggu.

ABSTRACT

This research examines transition markers in ten Bible narratives published on the internet for Sunday School children using a descriptive qualitative approach. Referring to Vincent's (1984) theory, transition markers function as mini-bridges connecting ideas within texts, ensuring narrative cohesion and coherence. The analysis encompasses four major categories: emphasis transitions, addition transitions, order transitions, and contrast transitions. By examining how these linguistic bridges facilitate reader comprehension and enhance the delivery of moral messages, this study addresses the growing need for effective digital religious content. The research's significance is amplified by the substantial increase in Indonesian internet users, predicted to reach 221,563,479 people in 2024, and the global growth of social media users by 282 million in the past year.

Keywords: Transition Markers, Bible Narratives, Sunday School.

INTRODUCTION

The study of transition markers in religious texts draws from both linguistic and educational theories. Vincent's (1984) framework identifies transition markers as bridges linking ideas and ensuring textual cohesion. These transitions range from simple conjunctions like "and," "but," and "so" to more sophisticated phrases such as "in addition," "on the other hand," and "as a result." Their primary function extends beyond mere connection to include emphasis, addition, ordering, and contrast. Research demonstrates that effective use of transitions can significantly impact reader comprehension and engagement. Particularly in religious texts, where complex spiritual concepts must be conveyed clearly, transitions serve as crucial navigational tools. They help eradicate abrupt jumps between ideas, making narratives smoother and more comprehensible for young readers.

METHOD

A. Research Design

This study employs a qualitative descriptive approach with textual analysis as its primary method. The research design incorporates three key components: a qualitative analysis framework examining transition types and functions, descriptive documentation of transition roles in creating coherency, and systematic categorization of transitions by their purposes.

B. Research Subject

This study analyzes ten selected Biblical narratives from various Christian education websites and digital platforms used in Sunday Schools. These narratives were chosen through purposive sampling to ensure diversity in narrative patterns and transition marker usage. The texts were selected for their clear moral messaging, age-appropriate content, and consistent use of transition markers, ranging from simple conjunctions to complex phrases. They are available in both English and Indonesian, allowing for cross-linguistic comparison. The chosen narratives cover a range of Biblical themes, such as Creation and the Parables of Jesus, and are actively used in current Sunday School programs, confirmed through online platforms and engagement metrics.

C. Research Object

The research object of this study is the transition markers found within the selected Biblical narratives. These markers include four distinct types: emphasis markers (e.g., "indeed," "notably"), which highlight key points and reinforce important messages; addition markers (e.g., "furthermore," "in addition"), which facilitate the progression of ideas and build upon previous concepts; order markers (e.g., "first," "then"), which establish the temporal or logical sequence of events; and contrast markers (e.g., "however," "on the other hand"), which introduce different perspectives or contrasting ideas. The study explores how these markers function as "mini-bridges" within the larger narrative, enhancing coherence and guiding young readers through the text. By examining their placement, frequency, and effectiveness, the research investigates how these linguistic elements support both the emotional and logical flow of the narratives, making complex spiritual concepts more accessible and engaging for children in a Sunday School context.

D. Technique Of Data Collection

Data collection follows a systematic approach to capture both the frequency and function of transition markers. First, each narrative is thoroughly analyzed to identify and categorize transition markers. The coding process involves two stages: primary coding for basic types of markers and secondary coding to assess their contribution to narrative coherence and reader comprehension.

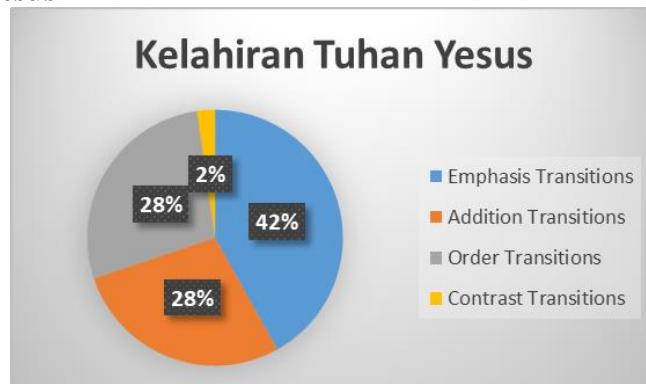

To ensure accuracy, coding is double-checked by multiple researchers and reviewed for consistency. Data is documented using digital tools and specialized software for text analysis, and comprehensive matrices track the distribution and impact of transition markers across the narratives. This method allows for a detailed analysis of how transition markers guide readers through the narrative and enhance their understanding of religious concepts.

RESULT AND DISCUSSIONS

In this chapter, the researcher presents the results of research based on the Transition contained in 10 stories of Bibble characters for Sunday school children. Then the transition contained in each story are classified into four major categories: emphasis transitions, addition transitions, order transitions, and contrast transitions.

1. Kelahiran Tuhan Yesus

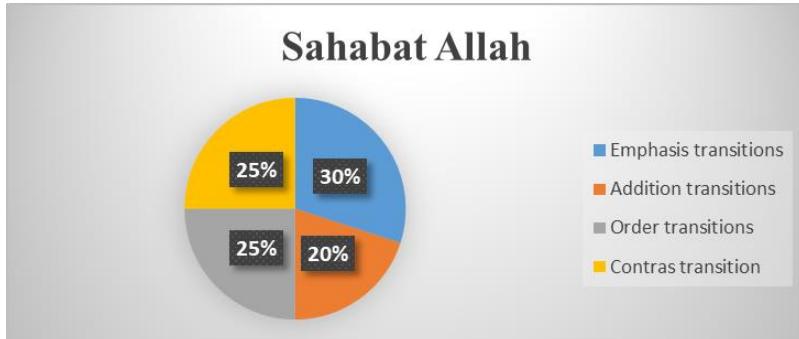

Based on the analysis of transition words used in the text "Kelahiran Tuhan Yesus," the following observations can be made: A total of 24 transition words were used throughout the narrative. The most frequent type was emphasis transitions, which appeared 10 times, comprising 42% of all transitions. This reflects a strong emphasis on highlighting significant details and key elements in the story, drawing attention to the crucial moments and actions of the characters. Addition transitions occurred 7 times, accounting for 28% of the transitions. These words helped to expand on ideas and add supporting details, enriching the narrative with further context and layering information. Order transitions were used 7 times as well, making up another 28% of the transitions. These helped to structure the sequence of events, guiding the reader through the timeline of Joseph and Mary's journey and the unfolding scenes of Jesus' birth. Contrast transitions were the least frequent, appearing only once and making up 2% of the transitions. This highlights that the narrative has minimal focus on contrasting ideas, instead favoring a more cohesive and flowing progression of events. Overall, the distribution of transition words indicates a narrative that emphasizes key moments and effectively sequences events while adding rich detail, with very little use of contrasting elements.

2. Sahabat Allah

Based on the analysis of transition words used in the text "Sahabat Allah" features a total of 20 transition words used throughout the narrative. Emphasis transitions appear 6 times, making up 30% of all transitions. These words, such as "karena" and "ternyata," are used to underscore significant ideas and moments, highlighting Abraham's faith and the fulfillment of God's promises. Addition transitions occur 4 times, or 20% of the total. Words like "juga" and "dan" help to expand on details about Abraham's wealth and blessings, adding more context to his life and the events unfolding around him. Order transitions are used 5 times, comprising 25% of the total transitions. These transitions, including "suatu hari" and "kemudian," serve to organize the sequence of events, guiding the reader through the timeline of Abraham's encounters with God and the subsequent miracles. Contrast transitions also appear 5 times, making up the remaining 25%. Words like "namun" and "tetapi" are used to present contrasting situations, emphasizing the challenges Abraham faced, such as his old age or Sara's initial disbelief, before showcasing his unwavering faith in God. Overall, the use of transition words in this narrative creates a balanced structure that emphasizes key elements, adds rich details, and clearly sequences events, while also highlighting moments of contrast to underscore the challenges and miracles in Abraham's journey of faith.

3. Saling Tolong Menolong

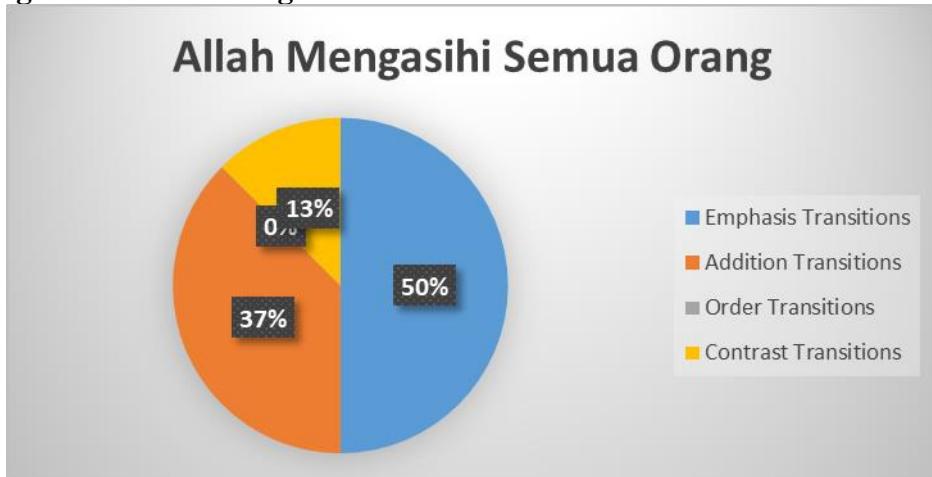

Based on the analysis of transition words used in the text "Saling Tolong Menolong" includes a total of 6 transition words used within the text. Emphasis transitions are used 4 times, making up 67% of the total. Words such as "ternyata" and phrases like "seolah-olah" and "seakan-akan" emphasize the importance of loving and caring for others, highlighting how certain actions have deeper, often unexpected meanings, such as unknowingly hosting angels or empathizing with those who suffer. Addition transitions occur just once, making up 16% of the total. The word "juga" serves to connect and add to the list of ways to show compassion, emphasizing a comprehensive approach to helping others. Order transitions are used only once, also making up 17% of the total. The phrase "baik, dan" organizes information about the consistency of Christ's nature, emphasizing the unchanging truth of His character. No contrast transitions appear in the narrative 0%, indicating a lack of opposing ideas. Instead, the story focuses on continuous encouragement to perform acts of kindness and love without highlighting any conflicts or contradictions. Overall, the transition words used emphasize key moral teachings, underscore the call to active empathy, and maintain a cohesive flow that encourages consistent acts of love and support for others, with a focus on unity and faith.

4. Allah Mengasihi Semua Orang

Based on the analysis of transition words used in the text "Allah Mengasihi Semua Orang" contains a total of 8 transition words and phrases used throughout the narrative. Emphasis transitions appear 4 times, representing 50% of the total. Words like "sebab," "berarti," "beginilah," and "begitu" are used to stress the importance of love, the origins of love from God, and the magnitude of God's love. These transitions underscore the fundamental message that love is central to knowing and experiencing God. Addition transitions are used 3 times, making up 37% of the total. Words like "dan" and "juga" help to expand on the concepts of love and unity, linking ideas about how love should be expressed among people and emphasizing that everyone should participate in sharing love. Order transitions do not appear in this narrative 0%, indicating a lack of emphasis on the sequence of events. The focus is primarily on the qualities and expressions of love rather than a chronological order. Contrast transitions are used only once, or 13% of the total. The word "tetapi" introduces a contrasting idea, highlighting the unseen nature of God versus the tangible way His presence is felt when people love one another. Overall, the transition words emphasize the importance of love and the divine origin of love while connecting concepts of unity and completeness. The minimal use of contrast and the absence of order transitions reflect a straightforward and unified message of God's love and the call to love others.

5. Berbuat Baik dan Rendah Hati

Based on the analysis of transition words used in the text "Berbuat Baik dan Rendah Hati" features a total of 6 transition words and phrases, effectively highlighting the narrative's core messages of kindness and humility. Emphasis transitions appear 2 times, making up 34% of the total. Words like "seperti" and "dengan begitu" are used to emphasize how people should treat one another and the expected outcomes of living a righteous life in Christ. These phrases stress the importance of harmonious and respectful interactions. Addition transitions are used 2 times, also accounting for 33% of the total. The use of "dan" serves to connect ideas about the qualities of kindness and humility, as well as linking gentle and respectful communication. These transitions enhance the narrative's flow, underlining the integration of goodness and humility in everyday actions. Order transitions are absent 0%, suggesting that the narrative does not emphasize a specific sequence of actions but rather presents a holistic view of how to live with goodness and humility. Contrast transitions appear twice, representing 33% of the total. Words like “sebaliknya” and “daripada” introduce contrasts, such as the idea of responding to insults with blessings rather than retaliating and the preference of suffering for doing good rather than for doing wrong. These contrasts highlight the countercultural approach of responding to negativity with grace. Overall, the transitions emphasize themes of kindness, humility, and the value of choosing good over evil. The equal distribution of emphasis, addition, and contrast transitions illustrates a balanced narrative focused on moral and ethical behavior.

6. Perjalanan Panjang

Based on the analysis of transition words used in the text "Perjalanan Panjang" includes a total of 21 transition words and phrases, which help to guide the reader through the emotional and physical journey of the Israelites. Emphasis transitions are used 5 times, accounting for 26% of the total. Words like "kini," "demikianlah," and "begitulah" are employed to highlight significant moments, such as when God provides guidance or when the Israelites repeatedly complain. These transitions emphasize key turning points in the narrative, reinforcing the themes of divine intervention and human doubt. Addition transitions appear 6 times, making up 31% of the total. The use of words like "dan" and "juga" serves to connect events and actions, such as Moses praying and God responding, or God providing food and water. These phrases help to illustrate the continuous cycle of provision and complaint, emphasizing the generosity and patience of God. Order transitions are the most frequent, occurring 8 times 42%. Phrases like "lalu," "kemudian," "hari demi hari," and "sampai akhirnya" establish a clear sequence of events, guiding the reader through the Israelites' journey. These transitions help to organize the story, showing how God consistently led the people, despite their complaints. Contrast transitions are used 2 times, representing 1% of the total. Words like "namun" highlight the Israelites' ingratitude and dissatisfaction, even after receiving miraculous help. These contrasts underscore the tension between divine provision and human discontent, emphasizing the recurring theme of ungratefulness. Overall, the narrative effectively uses a balance of transitions to convey a journey marked by miracles and persistent human struggles. The emphasis on order transitions reinforces the structured progression of events, while contrast transitions draw attention to the challenges of maintaining faith.

8. Ketaatan Abraham

Based on the analysis of transition words used in the text "Ketaatan Abraham, there are 11 transition words and phrases that guide the reader through Abraham and Sara's journey as they obey God's command. The majority are Addition Transitions, appearing 9 times and making up 99% of the total. Words like "dan juga, and serta" connect various actions and events, highlighting the unity and collaboration between Abraham and Sara as they prepare for their journey. These transitions emphasize the cooperative nature of their preparation, from organizing their belongings to coordinating with their servants and livestock. Contrast Transitions appear twice, or 1% of the total, with words like "tapi" that underline the doubts and challenges Abraham and Sara face, especially regarding the promise of numerous descendants despite Sara's current childlessness. These contrast transitions underscore the tension between their faith in God's promise and the reality they face, reflecting the human struggle with doubt even amidst strong belief. Unlike previous narratives, Emphasis Transitions and Order Transitions are not used here, as the focus is more on Abraham and Sara's immediate actions and emotional responses rather than a structured sequence of events or specific moments of emphasis. Overall, the story relies on addition transitions to portray the joint efforts and dedication of Abraham and Sara, while the contrast transitions draw attention to their challenges of faith, conveying themes of obedience, partnership, and resilience in the face of uncertainty.

9. Hidup yang Berbuah

In the analysis of "Sales," four types of transitions are utilized to guide the reader's understanding. The most prominent category is Addition Transitions, which appear 49% of the time. These transitions help to connect various ideas and actions, illustrating the continuity in the sales process and linking multiple elements to create a cohesive narrative. Emphasis Transitions and Order Transitions are both used 25% of the time. Emphasis transitions highlight important points, drawing attention to specific moments or ideas in the sales narrative. They are crucial for marking significant achievements or critical sales milestones. Order transitions, on the other hand, organize the sequence of actions and events, creating a clear structure and flow, which helps readers follow the progression of sales activities step-by-step. Contrast Transitions appear the least, making up only 1% of the total. These transitions highlight differences or opposing elements, allowing for comparisons that might illustrate challenges or contrasts within the sales data. Overall, the "Sales" analysis relies heavily on addition, emphasis, and order transitions to structure the content effectively, with contrast transitions used sparingly to bring attention to occasional differences or challenges.

CONCLUSION

This research reveals significant patterns in how linguistic bridges facilitate comprehension and moral message delivery in digital religious content. The findings demonstrate that addition transitions (averaging 35.7%) and order transitions (31.9%) dominate the narratives, effectively connecting ideas and maintaining chronological flow, particularly evident in stories like "Bahtera Nuh" where order transitions reached 62% to clearly sequence events. Emphasis transitions (24.9%) strategically highlight key moral lessons, as seen in "Saling Tolong Menolong" where they comprised 67% of transitions to underscore the importance of helping others. Contrast transitions, used most sparingly (7.5%), primarily serve to underscore moral choices and consequences, notably employed in stories like "Sahabat Allah" to highlight faith challenges. This distribution pattern aligns with the pedagogical needs of young readers, as the prevalent use of addition and order transitions creates clear narrative progression while emphasis transitions reinforce important spiritual concepts. The research confirms Vincent's (1984) theory about transition markers functioning as mini-bridges, particularly in digital religious content where clear connection of ideas is crucial for maintaining engagement. The findings' significance is amplified by Indonesia's projected internet user growth to 221,563,479 people by 2024 and the global increase of 282 million social media users in the past year, suggesting an increasing need for well-structured digital religious content. These insights provide valuable guidance for religious educators and content creators, offering a framework for crafting more effective digital narratives that can better serve the growing population of digital users while ensuring the clear transmission of religious values to young audiences. The research also demonstrates that thoughtful implementation of transition markers can enhance both textual cohesion and the delivery of spiritual messages, making complex biblical concepts more accessible and engaging for children in modern digital formats.
